Description

A.B. Simpson emphasizes that divine anointing is essential for a deeper spiritual life, rooted in love as described in Ephesians 3:17. He explains that the fullness of God's love enables us to trust Him more easily and serves as a source of healing and strength in our lives. By embracing the heart of Jesus, we can extend love to others, even those who seem unworthy, seeing them through the lens of His love. This transformative love not only enriches our relationships but also revitalizes our physical and spiritual well-being.

Transcript

Divine anointing is the secret of the deeper life, but that ye [may be] rooted and grounded in love (Ephesians 3:17) is the substance and sweetness of it. The fullness of the divine love in the heart will make everything easy. It is very easy to trust those whom we love, and the more we realize their love the more we will trust them for it. This love is the source of healing. The tide of love flowing through our bodies will strangely strengthen our very frame and the spring of youth and freshness in our physical being. The secret of love is very simple.

It is to take the heart of Jesus for our love and claim His love for every need of life, whether it be toward God or toward others.

It is very satisfying to think of other persons in this way. "I will take the heart of Jesus toward them, to let me love them as He loves them." Then we can love even the unworthy in some measure, if we see them in the light of His love-as they shall be and not as they now are, unworthy of our love.
