Description

A.B. Simpson emphasizes the glorious liberty that comes from being a child of God, urging believers to rise above self, circumstances, and the influences of sickness and negativity. He challenges the congregation to maintain a steadfast spirit, unaffected by emotions or external pressures, and to allow God's presence to transform their lives into a source of divine music. Simpson encourages Christians to stand free in the life of Christ, reflecting His glory and love in their daily interactions.

Transcript

Are you above self and self-pleasing in every way? Have you risen above circumstances so that you are not influenced by them? Are you above sickness and the evil forces around that would drag down your physical life into the quicksands? These forces are all around and if yielded to would quickly swamp us. God does not destroy sickness or its power to hurt, but He lifts us above it. Are you above your feelings, moods, emotions and states? Can you sail immovable as the starsthrough all sorts of weather? A harp will give out sweet music or discordant sounds as different fingers touch the strings. If the devil's hand is on your harp strings what hideous sounds they will produce.

But let the fingers of the Lord sweep over them, and they will breathe out celestial music.

Are you lifted above people, so that you are not bound by or to anyone except in the Lord? Are you standing free in His glorious life? I am risen with Christ, I am dwelling above; I am walking with Jesus below, I am shedding the light of His glory and love Around me wherever I go.
