

The Difference Between Chants and Music

by Alan Ives

Alan Ives explores the distinctions between chants and music in worship, emphasizing their unique roles and impacts on faith and community.

Duration: 1:21:38

Scripture: Exodus 17:6, John 4:10

Topics: "Godly Music"

Description

In this sermon, the speaker emphasizes the importance of receiving living water from the Lord. He refers to the story of Moses striking the rock and water flowing out to quench the thirst of the children of Israel. The speaker also connects this story to Jesus being the smitten rock, symbolizing the source of living water for believers. The sermon includes personal anecdotes about the speaker's family and their involvement in singing, highlighting the message of Christ's second coming. Overall, the sermon encourages listeners to seek the loving water of God and to be prepared for Christ's return.

Transcript

I could say it kind of like this right now. It depends upon how fast you want to get to New York. Okay, if you'll come on and share some stuff here with us.

The Lord promised that he would come again and receive us unto himself. Those of us that have trusted the Lord. Someone wrote a song called Coming Again and we'll sing that.

Coming again, I know he's coming again. I know he's coming for me, soon we shall see. Down from the heights of heaven above, he's coming again.

I know he's coming again. A glorious message to know that Christ is coming again. Christ is coming again.

Someday to earth the Lord will return to catch away his pride from the earth. Only the Savior Christ will arise to meet the Lord in the skies. Coming again, I know he's coming again.

I know he's coming for me, soon we shall see. Down from the heights of heaven above, he's coming again. I know he's coming again.

A glorious message to know that Christ is coming again. Christ is coming again. Someday the trump of God will resound and all the dead in Christ will be found.
