

Three Great Mysteries -- a Perishing World, a Loving God, a Life-Giving Christ.

by Andrew Murray

The sermon emphasizes the urgent need for the world's salvation and the role that God's Spirit can play in revealing its divine meaning to us.

Scripture: Matthew 28:19, John 3:16

Topics: "Evangelism", "God's Love"

Description

Andrew Murray emphasizes the profound mysteries of a perishing world, a loving God, and a life-giving Christ. He urges Christians to earnestly seek God's revelation of the dire state of humanity, highlighting the staggering number of souls lost daily in ignorance of God's love. Murray calls for a deep reflection on our own lives in light of eternity, challenging believers to recognize the urgency of sharing the Gospel. The sermon serves as a wake-up call to the church to respond to the spiritual plight of the world with compassion and action.

Transcript

Let us turn to our text again, and see what a difference it would make if God's Spirit really revealed to us its divine meaning. Look at the three great mysteries the words speak of -- a perishing world, a loving God, a life-giving Christ.

Just pause and think of a Christian, of yourself, asking God earnestly, perseveringly, believingly, to open his eyes, and give him a vision of the perishing world, and then setting one's self in the light of God and eternity to seek a due impression of its state.

You might begin with numbers. It is known that at least 100,000 souls pass out of the darkness of heathenism into the darker eternity every day. That means more than one every second. While we are enjoying ourselves, there they drop, moment by moment, over the precipice, in utter ignorance of God and his love. And there are of such in the world a thousand million, all living and dying in this darkness.
