Description

A.W. Tozer emphasizes that just as past generations were called to be God's people, we too have the privilege and responsibility to live out our faith in our own time. He encourages believers not to compare themselves to biblical heroes like Abraham or David, but to embrace their unique role in the present. Tozer reminds us that being alive today means we can actively witness, pray, and support those in need, thus fulfilling God's purpose for our lives. He urges us to give our love and devotion to God, as we may discover profound truths He wishes to share with us. Ultimately, we are called to be faithful in our generation, making a difference in the world around us.

Transcript

Just as those who lived in the past had the privilege of being God's people of faith then, so do we in our own day! It is good to come to the understanding that while God wants us to be holy and Spirit-filled, He does not expect us to look like Abraham or to play the harp like David or to have the same spiritual insights given to Paul. All of the former heroes of the faith are dead. You are alive in your generation. A Bible proverb says that it is better to be a living dog than a dead lion. You may wish to be Abraham or Isaac or Jacob, but remember they have been asleep for centuries, and you are still around! You can witness for our Lord today! You can still pray!

You can still give of your substance to help those who are in need!

In this, your own generation, give God all your love, all your devotion. You do not know what holy, happy secret God may want to whisper to your responsive heart!
