

Majesty-and Meekness

by A.W. Tozer

The sermon highlights the eternal union of God's majesty and meekness in Jesus Christ, emphasizing the importance of reverence and awe in our relationship with Him.

Scripture: Psalm 95:6, Isaiah 53:2, Matthew 11:29, Matthew 28:18, John 1:14, John 14:9, Philippians 2:7-8, Colossians 1:16-17, Hebrews 4:15, Revelation 19:16

Topics: "Majesty of Christ", "Meekness of Christ"

Description

A.W. Tozer emphasizes the dual nature of Jesus Christ, highlighting His majesty as God and His meekness as man. He reflects on how the prophets described God as both beautiful and royal, yet also mysterious and humble. Tozer illustrates that Jesus embodies both attributes, being a vulnerable child in His humanity while simultaneously standing in divine authority before rulers. The sermon calls believers to recognize and worship Jesus for His unique combination of majesty and meekness. Ultimately, Tozer reminds us that Christ will return in both His divine majesty and human form.

Transcript

When the prophets try to describe for me the attributes, the graces, the worthiness of the God who appeared to them and dealt with them, I feel that I can kneel down and follow their admonition: "He is thy Lord-worship thou Him!" They described Him as radiantly beautiful and fair. They said that He was royal and that He was gracious. They described Him as a mysterious being, and yet they noted His meekness. The meekness was His humanity. The majesty was His deity. You find them everlastingly united in Him. So meek that He nursed at His mother's breast, cried like any baby and needed all the human care that every child needs.

But He was also God, and in His majesty He stood before Herod and before Pilate.

When He returns, coming down from the sky, it will be in His majesty, the majesty of God; yet it will be in the majesty of the Man who is God! This is our Lord Jesus Christ. Before His foes He stands in majesty. Before His friends, He stands in meekness!
