

High Up in the Swiss Alps

by Basilea Schlink

Jesus is a source of joy and light in the darkest of times, bringing comfort and hope to those who are struggling.

Duration: 1:01

Scripture: Psalm 27:1, Psalm 34:18, Matthew 5:14, John 1:5, John 8:12

Topics: "Heart Renewal", "Jesus Worship"

Description

This sermon draws a parallel between the cold, sunless, empty ice grotto in the Swiss Alps and our hearts, highlighting the need for Jesus, the little Christ child, to fill our emptiness with love and worship. It emphasizes that Jesus is like a constant sun that can illuminate even the darkest places in our hearts, bringing joy and comfort in times of sadness.

Transcript

High up in the Swiss Alps, the Jungfrauoch is one of the world's most beautiful spots. Christmas is nearing, and here beneath the glacial ice lies a cold, sunless, empty ice grotto. Aren't our hearts sometimes like this, cold and empty? But even in the most remote places, the little Christ child is waiting to be loved and worshipped at Christmas.

You have a friend in Jesus Christ, like a sun that never sets, he lights up every darkness. So let Jesus, the source of joy, shine into your heart. Then the depths of your darkness will become light, and you will be comforted in your sadness.

Goodbye, and God bless you.
