

America Drawn Into The Wilderness by God

by Carter Conlon

This sermon emphasizes how God, in His loving kindness, leads us into challenging and unfamiliar seasons, stripping away distractions and false hopes of self-sufficiency. It highlights the need for a return to complete reliance on God, echoing the heart of David's dependence. Despite our failures and shortcomings, God's mercy draws us into the wilderness to realign with His purpose and seek His intervention for His glory.

Scripture: Psalm 23:4, Isaiah 43:19, Psalm 51:10, 2 Chronicles 7:14, Jeremiah 29:13

Topics: "Dependence on God", "Embracing the Wilderness"

Transcript

He's drawn you in his loving kindness into the wilderness. He's drawn you and I at this season in our juncture as a nation into a very dry place, a very unfamiliar place, a place where all the distractions are being taken away, and all the hope in a sense that humankind in a sense can solve its own problem is now gone. And we find ourselves in a place where the only thing left in our heart is that which was in the heart of David.

Oh God, oh God, it's got to be you. It's got to be only you. You've got to come and do something that will vindicate your own name.

We have, yes, failed. We have fallen. We let our guard down.

We forgot who we were as a people. We forgot why we're established as a nation. But in your mercy, you have drawn us into the wilderness to reason with us one more time.
