

His Bow Abode in Strength

by C.H. Spurgeon

---

C.H. Spurgeon's sermon emphasizes the divine strength provided by God to His people, particularly in times of temptation and trial, through the covenant relationship exemplified by Joseph's experience.

Scripture: Genesis 49:24, Psalm 18:32, Psalm 28:7, Isaiah 41:10, Romans 8:31, 2 Corinthians 12:9, Ephesians 6:10, Philippians 4:13, Hebrews 13:5-6, 1 Peter 5:10

Topics: "God's Covenant", "Divine Strength"

---

Description

C.H. Spurgeon emphasizes that the true strength given by God to His faithful, like Joseph, is not mere bravado but a genuine, divine empowerment. This strength enables believers to resist temptation and is a result of God's intimate involvement, as He supports and strengthens them like a father does with his child. Spurgeon highlights the significance of God's covenant with Jacob, which assures Christians that all blessings and grace flow from this divine promise. Even in the face of adversity, believers can find assurance in their strength, as it is rooted in the mighty God of Jacob. Ultimately, all glory must be given to God for the strength He provides.

---

Transcript

That strength which God gives to His Josephs is real strength; it is not a boasted valour, a fiction, a thing of which men talk, but which ends in smoke; it is true--divine strength. Why does Joseph stand against temptation? Because God gives him aid. There is nought that we can do without the power of God. All true strength comes from "the mighty God of Jacob." Notice in what a blessedly familiar way God gives this strength to Joseph--"The arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob."

Thus God is represented as putting His hands on Joseph's hands, placing His arms on Joseph's arms. Like as a father teaches his children, so the Lord teaches them that fear Him. He puts His arms upon them. Marvellous condescension! God Almighty, Eternal, Omnipotent, stoops from His throne and lays His hand upon the child's hand, stretching His arm upon the arm of Joseph, that he may be made strong! This strength was also covenant strength, for it is ascribed to "the mighty God of Jacob."

Now, wherever you read of the God of Jacob in the Bible, you should remember the covenant with Jacob. Christians love to think of God's covenant. All the power, all the grace, all the blessings, all the mercies, all the comforts, all the things we have, flow to us from the well-head, through the covenant. If there were no covenant, then we should fail indeed; for all grace proceeds from it, as light and heat from the sun. No angels ascend or descend, save upon that ladder which Jacob saw, at the top of which stood a covenant

God. Christian, it may be that the archers have sorely grieved you, and shot at you, and wounded you, but still your bow abides in strength; be sure, then, to ascribe all the glory to Jacob's God.

---

Source: <https://sermonindex.net/speakers/ch-spurgeon/his-bow-abode-in-strength/>

Grow in Your Walk with Christ

---

Listen and read messages that will stir your heart for Christ and point you to deeper repentance and devotion.

- 50,000+ Sermons from speakers past and present
- 3,900+ Classic Christian Books freely readable online
- 1,200+ Bible Translations and Commentaries
- Over 450k forum posts — Join our vibrant online Christian forum

www.sermonindex.net