

February 12. 1678.

by Jane Lead

The sermon emphasizes the importance of nurturing our inner self and protecting it from external influences in order to achieve spiritual fruitfulness.

Scripture: Psalm 1:3, Proverbs 4:23, John 4:14, Galatians 6:9, Ephesians 6:12

Topics: "Spiritual Growth", "Inner Renewal"

Description

Jane Lead emphasizes the importance of guarding and nurturing the inner wellspring of life within us, warning that external influences like stones or earth can block this source, leading to spiritual dryness. She encourages believers to diligently protect this wellspring from anything that could hinder its flow, as it is a coveted prize by opposing spirits. Like Isaac, we are urged not to yield to these hindrances but press on until we reach Rehoboth, the place of abundant fruitfulness.

Transcript

Be choice and tender to your deep springing Well, that is within your own Ground, if either Stones or Earth do fall thereinto, you will know its springs will fail, and then your Spirits will be in drouth. Therefore watch to keep all clods of Earth out, that would stop your Bubling Well of Life. Which the Philistine Spirits are in strife for, but Isaac's Spirit will not give way to them, till he comes to Rehoboth the Land of fruitfulness.
