

June 24. 1678.

by Jane Lead

This sermon emphasizes the importance of faith as a means to overcome evil and find redemption in God's salvation.

Scripture: 1 Corinthians 16:13, Ephesians 6:16, Hebrews 11:6, 1 Peter 1:5

Topics: "Faith And Trust", "Spiritual Warfare"

Description

Jane Lead preaches about the importance of having unwavering faith in God, emphasizing the need to trust in His redeeming power and salvation. She encourages believers to offer up their faith like a heave-offering, which will counteract evil forces and allow God's salvation to manifest. Jane urges her audience to stay vigilant and strong in their faith, as this is the only way to overcome the troubles and challenges that may arise to steal away the blessings God has in store.

Transcript

This Word came upon some occasion, in which my Mind was exercised, saying, Go thou forth, and fear no reproach. Let thy Heave-offering be the smoaking Incense of Faith: That will turn the stream of all evil indeed. This is the time wherein God's Salvation will appear. His redeeming Power is very near. Be therefore watchful and let not the Cords of Faith slack. For hereby ye only can tread down the terrible One, who is risen out of the Sea, as a troubler to snatch away the secret Prize.
