

No Hope In Time

by Jason Bellard

This sermon emphasizes the urgency of sharing the word of God with those in need, highlighting the fleeting nature of time and the importance of living for God rather than for oneself. It calls for forsaking personal desires, caring for others, and recognizing that true hope lies in Jesus, not in the passing of time.

Scripture: Psalm 90:12, Matthew 16:26, 1 Peter 4:7, James 4:14

Topics: "Urgency of Evangelism", "Living for God"

Transcript

Time's too short for our busy lives It's way too many laws, it's much too little time Our days are numbered and our calling is sure To share the word of God with the hopeless and poor This is your life, this is your call When you live for yourself and live for your God Say goodbye to your own desires, forsake all your cares Your treasures will fade away, don't put on airs Cause there's no hope in time My friends, we have no hope in time There's no hope in time, no time to spare But there's a hope in dying that's meant to be shared And as time goes by and the word goes unspoken Time stands still for a heart still broken This is your life, this is your call When you live for yourself and live for your God Say goodbye to your own desires, forsake all your cares Your treasures will fade away, so don't put on airs Cause there's no hope in time We have no hope in time Think of your loved ones living their lives Hoping their freedom might buy them some time Consider those loved ones in darkness below And the blood's on your hands since they were never told Consider your life, consider your call When you live for yourself and live for your God Say goodbye to your own desires, forsake all your cares Your treasures will fade away, it's time to prepare Cause there's no hope in time You might think you have much more time But all the truth is that there is no hope in time And Jesus is our only hope in dying But there's no hope in time Thanks for watching!
