

Ravenhill Humor - the First Submarine

by Leonard Ravenhill

Leonard Ravenhill uses humor to explore the biblical story of Jonah, illustrating deeper spiritual truths through a lighthearted lens.

Duration: 0:44

Topics: "Ravenhill Humor"

Description

In this sermon, the speaker discusses the invention of the first submarine and the lack of daylight inside it. He then mentions a biblical figure named Jonah who traveled in a similar vessel. Jonah is described as being at the bottom of the Mediterranean ocean, comparing it to the first waterbed ever invented. The speaker humorously suggests that Jonah's experience inside the whale was similar to being on a waterbed.

Transcript

I'll tell you, there wasn't much daylight in the first submarine that was ever invented. Do you know when, who traveled in the first submarine? You don't know, Mike? You ignoramus. Would you imagine a past of a place like this? Never heard of Jonah? So he goes down, what does Jonah say? He's at the bottom of the Mediterranean ocean, and it's the first waterbed that was ever invented.

No, it's a rubber bed. Every time the whale goes, he goes, you know, and it's like you're doing your waterbed.
