How much do you really want God in your lives? We might all immediately say, Lord, we want everything you have, but when God really comes and you begin to realize His power and His majesty and who He is, that He's an all-consuming fire, that He doesn't just want a portion of our lives, He wants all of our lives, it becomes a little bit overwhelming. You don't answer that question so quickly. How much of God do we really want in our lives? How much room do we really have for God to flood our lives and take control? He comes with suddenness and intensity.

He comes with an overwhelming force in mind, not to kill us and maim us and destroy us, to burn out what doesn't belong, to burn out our lack of interest. Come on, can we really say that we're passionate for Him? Can we really say, if someone watched our lives, watched us walk and watched us live and interacted with us, would they really see the passion and the fire and the burning? Would they really see, you're all about Jesus, you burn for Jesus. He's everything to you, isn't He? Would they see that or would they say, you're a very committed, godly person, I admire you? I wonder what would happen if God invaded our lives.

I wonder what would happen if God invaded our services. But what would happen if God just took over? Listen, it's one thing to shout about it and get excited about it, it's another thing to experience the fire. It's another thing when it's not just anointing and blessing, but God's starting to deal with your inner being.

God's starting to deal with the motivation of your heart, and God's starting to deal with coldness and compromise and wrong attitude.
