Description

In this sermon, the preacher emphasizes the importance of recognizing and accepting the truth of God's word. He criticizes the tendency of people to attend church but not truly allow the word of God to have an impact on their lives. The preacher urges the congregation to understand that salvation is about being saved from the wrath of God and not just about pleasing the flesh or following traditions. He emphasizes the need for repentance and prayer of faith, as well as confessing sins to one another, in order to experience restoration and righteousness in God's eyes. The sermon concludes with a plea for everyone to make things right with God and to rely on the grace and mercy found in Jesus' sacrifice on the cross.
