Description

Norman Grubb emphasizes the concept of a shared life, drawing from the idea of Christ in us and us in Him. He delves into the profound mystery of being in Christ and Christ being in us, acknowledging the limitations of human understanding in fully grasping this truth. Grubb highlights that the Cross serves as the gateway to this shared life, with Christ being the ultimate focus and objective of our faith.

Transcript

"I've got a shared life," He said, as I'll show you a little later on from Scripture. Jesus had a shared life. We have a shared life, a united life. Christ in you, we in Him, that's the other side of it.

I can't say this moment that my mind can compass it. I in Him. He in me. I can't say I can compass it. I've spent hours seeking to compass it--perhaps I haven't sufficient light yet. Thank God, I know I know it. In other words, I know Him! I can see a little. Brothers, the Cross is not the centre and is not the objective. This is the centre and objective. The Cross is the gateway. The Cross isn't the end; the Christ is the end. And the Christ is this One--joined to me forever and I am joined to Him forever. There are astounding statements in God's Word.
