

Coming To An End Of Ourselves

by Randy Krahn

This sermon emphasizes the importance of surrendering all aspects of our lives to God, using the story of John and Peter encountering the lame beggar at the synagogue. It highlights the need to empty ourselves of personal wealth and ambitions, recognizing that true power lies in what God can do with what we offer Him.

Scripture: Luke 9:23, Philippians 3:8, Romans 12:1, Matthew 16:24, Galatians 2:20

Topics: "Surrender", "Divine Power"

Description

This sermon emphasizes the importance of surrendering all aspects of our lives to God, using the story of John and Peter encountering the lame beggar at the synagogue. It highlights the need to empty ourselves of personal wealth and ambitions, recognizing that true power lies in what God can do with what we offer Him.

Transcript

When the brothers, John and Peter, went by that synagogue there, and the man there, the beggar, who was lame, was sitting there asking alms. They said, silver and gold have I none. The problem is, brothers, our pockets still have some silver and we have a little gold.

When we can come to the end of ourselves, and we can realize it's not of what we can do with the millions and the billions, but it's what he can do with whatever we bring and put in, all into the money plot. And say, Lord, have all of me, all my hopes and dreams and plans, all my ambitions, I surrender these in your hands.
