The sermon 'Fountain of Siloam' by Robert Murray M'Cheyne highlights Jesus Christ as the ultimate source of peace and salvation, emphasizing the mercies and love of God towards humanity.

Scripture: Isaiah 8:6, John 7:37

Topics: "Sharing the Gospel", "Spiritual Refreshment"

---

Description

Robert Murray M'Cheyne reflects on the Fountain of Siloam, symbolizing the peace and salvation brought by Jesus, who is the 'One sent from God.' He draws parallels between the gentle waters of the fountain that quench physical thirst and the spiritual refreshment that comes from Christ. M'Cheyne emphasizes the importance of embodying Jesus' image and sharing His mercies with others, encouraging believers to live a life dedicated to spreading the Savior's fame.

Transcript

Isaiah viii. 6.

Beneath Moriah's rocky side

A gentle fountain springs,

Silent and soft its waters glide,

Like the peace the Spirit brings.

The thirsty Arab stoops to drink

Of the cool and quiet wave,

And the thirsty spirit stops to think

Of Him who came to save.

Siloam is the fountain's name,

It means "One sent from God;"

And thus the holy Saviour's fame

It gently spreads abroad.

O grant that I, like this sweet well,

May Jesus' image bear,

And spend my life, my all, to tell

How full His mercies are.

Foot of Carmel, June 1839.
