Description

Rolfe Barnard emphasizes the critical importance of genuine repentance in the Christian faith, pointing out that many in the church today lack a true understanding of the holy demands of God and the necessity of surrendering completely to Christ. He highlights the detrimental effects of a shallow, sentimental faith that avoids facing the reality of sin and the need for obedience to God. Barnard warns that without genuine repentance, salvation is missed, and lives will ultimately fail to reflect the transformative power of God.

Transcript

...I am dead certain that the mess we are in religiously and spiritually now, the love-sick so-called "church" people, the sickly sentimental crop of so-called "believers" who are enthusiastic about a fair or a frolic but are conspicuously absent from prayer meeting -- I am sure that this is due to the fact that our churches are full of people who are not born right...

Somehow or another they got into our professing churches without ever having come face to face with the holy demands of a Holy God, and being brought in the face of those demands to the place of throwing up all hands of self-effort and self-confidence and turning one's self over lock, stock and barrel to the Sovereign Christ. Somehow or another they have missed the main business. Somehow or another they got in what we call the church without turning in abhorrence and in utter conviction against sin, without turning from their sin to obedience unto God.

And, of course, their lives fail! If we dodge this step [repentance], we miss out on salvation!...
