Description

This sermon emphasizes the exclusive nature of Christianity, stating that nobody comes to the Father except through Jesus Christ. It highlights the importance of acknowledging the truth of God's word and the uniqueness of Christianity in recognizing God's revelation to humanity. The sermon addresses the common question of why Christianity is considered right while other religions are wrong, emphasizing the aspect of worship and the acknowledgment of the one true and living God.

Transcript

Nobody comes to me except, nobody goes to the Father except through me. Jesus said, we believe that he proclaimed the truth, the word of God is truth. And we gravitate, we recognize that truth.

So we're just simply acknowledging what God has already outlined. And if we got into more scripture, it talks about his invisible attributes are clearly seen, though we are without excuse, because creation does screen creator and we suppress that truth. So Christianity acknowledges the truth of who God said he was.

So it's not some other religion coming up with something. We're acknowledging the truth of God. And that's where there's a lot of different religions is because they're all trying to find God, where Christianity says God came down to us and is relational, if that helps answer your question.

You know, that is a question that is probably the top question. Why is Christianity right and everybody's wrong? And there seems to be an arrogance there. And really, to me, it's arrogance that challenges God.

And we look to his word, we look to the different things to gauge truth. And if you look at all, if you study all the different religions, I think the point is that they were created to worship something. Everybody on the planet was created to worship something.

Therefore, then again, confirming God, whether you're Buddhist, whether you're Hindu, whether you're Muslim, Christian, whatever it is, we were created to worship God. And we acknowledge the one true and living God. And we that's why it's not we're right, you're wrong.

It's we're acknowledging God's truth and who he is.
