

Would You Have Been Embarrassed To Be In The Upper Room■

by Shane Idleman

This sermon emphasizes the profound and powerful presence of God, drawing parallels between the Old Testament revelations and the New Testament experiences like the filling of the upper room. It challenges listeners to consider if they would be embarrassed to encounter the power of God and highlights how encountering God's magnificence can wreck, break, and ultimately change a person. The need for spiritual revival in churches is underscored, calling for a renewed awakening to God's power and presence.

Scripture: Acts 2:1, Psalm 85:6, Ezekiel 37:5, Psalm 80:18, Habakkuk 3:2

Topics: "God's Presence", "Spiritual Revival"

Anytime I see that his presence was profound, was powerful, well, Shane, that's great for a revelation, that's great for the Old Testament, but what do you have in the New Testament? Well, have you ever read about the upper room? And when the presence of God filled that upper room? And all these critics, I like to say, would you have been embarrassed to be in the upper room? I bet you would have. I bet you would have been embarrassed to experience the power of God. Because that's what happens when sinful man encounters the magnificence of God.

It wrecks you. It breaks you. It changes you.

Sure, you're different. You've been impacted by the glory of God. And the sad reality is most churches resemble a cemetery dead to the things of God.

That's why they need spiritual resuscitation. And the prophets would cry out, Oh God, revive us again. Revive us again.

Wake us up. Let us feel your power and your presence again, like they spoke about in the olden days when you...
