Description

Thomas Brooks emphasizes the folly of relying on carnal reasoning over faith, warning that those who let their reason dictate their faith will face continual sorrow. He asserts that true freedom, holiness, and happiness come from living a life of faith, which involves unwavering trust in God even in difficult times. Brooks encourages believers to cling to God and maintain obedience, regardless of their circumstances, as faith leads to the highest expressions of life.

Transcript

He who goes to school to his own carnal reason, has a fool to his schoolmaster; and he who allows his faith to be overruled by his reason, shall never lack woe.

No man lives so free a life, so holy a life, so heavenly a life, so happy a life--as he who lives a life of faith. Now the soul is put upon the highest and the purest acts of faith, that is, to cleave to God, to hang upon God, and to carry it sweetly and obediently towards God, though He frowns, though He chides, though He strikes, yes, though He kills! 'For we walk by faith, and not by sight.' 2 Cor. 5:7
