

One Sin Never Goes Alone

by Thomas Brooks

Thomas Brooks warns that little sins can lead to greater sins if not cut off in their first motion.

Scripture: Genesis 4:8, 1 Kings 12:28-30, 1 Kings 21:25, Proverbs 4:23, Matthew 26:14-16, Romans 6:23, 1 Corinthians 5:6, Galatians 5:9, Hebrews 12:1, James 1:14-15

Topics: "Spiritual Vigilance", "The Danger of Sin"

Description

Thomas Brooks emphasizes that small sins often lead to greater sins, illustrating this with biblical examples such as Cain, Ahab, Jeroboam, and Judas. He warns that yielding to minor transgressions can predispose the heart to commit more serious offenses, creating a dangerous cycle of sin. Brooks stresses the importance of addressing even the smallest sins before they escalate into habits that can ultimately destroy the soul. The sermon serves as a call to vigilance against sin in all its forms, urging believers to cut off sin at its inception.

Transcript

Little sins make way for greater sins.

Cain's anger is seconded with murder.

Ahab's covetousness is attended with bloody cruelty.

Jeroboam's rebellion is attended with idolatry.

Judas' thievery is attended with treason.

One sin commonly disposes the heart to another sin.

Yielding to lesser sins, draws the soul to the commission of greater sins.

Oh there is a prodigious evil in the least of sins; it will quickly multiply itself into all manner of evils. Unless sin be cut off in the first motion, it will proceed to action,

and from action to delight, and from delight to custom, and from custom to a habit--and then the soul will be undone forever!
