

Soberly, Righteously, and Godly

by Thomas Brooks

The sermon emphasizes the importance of living a life that is sober, righteous, and godly, as a true reflection of a Christian's duty.

Scripture: Ecclesiastes 12:13, Romans 12:1, Titus 2:12

Topics: "Godliness", "Christian Duty"

Description

Thomas Brooks emphasizes the essence of a Christian's duty, which is to live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present world. He explains that living soberly pertains to our relationship with ourselves, righteously to our interactions with others, and godly in our devotion to God. This holistic approach to godliness encapsulates the true nature of a faithful life. Brooks encourages believers to embody these principles as a reflection of their faith and commitment to Christ.

Transcript

("Touchstone of Sincerity")

"Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world." Titus 2:12

These words contain the sum of a Christian's duty.

To live soberly toward ourselves, righteously toward our neighbors, and godly toward God--is true godliness indeed, and the whole duty of man.
