

Splendida Peccata

by Thomas Brooks

---

The sermon emphasizes the necessity of aligning our works with God's will to avoid them becoming splendid sins.

Scripture: Isaiah 64:6, John 15:5, Romans 12:1-2, Ephesians 2:10, Colossians 3:23-24

Topics: "Divine Guidance", "True Righteousness"

Description

Thomas Brooks emphasizes that all our good works and services must originate from God, be directed towards God, be done in God, and align with God's will; otherwise, they are merely 'splendida peccata' or splendid sins. He warns that without divine guidance and purpose, even our best intentions can fall short of true righteousness. The sermon calls for a deep reflection on the motivations behind our actions and the necessity of divine involvement in our lives.

Transcript

O sirs, all our pious works and services must be wrought . . . from God, for God, in God, and according to God-- or else they will be but splendida peccata--splendid sins!
