

The Righteousness of Sanctification

by Thomas Brooks

The righteousness of sanctification is the Spirit's infusing of holy principles into the soul, resulting in a new nature created in righteousness and true holiness.

Scripture: Galatians 5:22

Topics: "Righteousness", "Sanctification"

Description

Thomas Brooks emphasizes the significance of the righteousness of sanctification, which is the work of the Holy Spirit infusing divine qualities into believers, as outlined in Galatians 5:22-23. He explains that these qualities represent the new nature created in righteousness and true holiness, as stated in Ephesians 4:24. Brooks encourages believers to earnestly seek this righteousness, comparing their desire to that of a hungry man for food or a thirsty deer for water, assuring that those who do so will ultimately be filled.

Transcript

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control." Galatians 5:22-23

The righteousness of sanctification, or imparted righteousness, lies in the Spirit's infusing into the soul those holy principles, divine qualities, or supernatural graces, that the apostle mentions in Galatians 5:22-23.

These habits of grace, are nothing else but the new nature or new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness, Eph. 4:24.

He who hungers and thirsts after the righteousness of sanctification, out of a deep serious sense of his own unrighteousness; he who hungers and thirsts after the righteousness of sanctification, as earnestly as hungry men do for food, or as thirsty men do for drink, or as the hunted deer does after the water brooks--he is the blessed soul, and shall at last be filled.
