

Where Will All These Men Be Within a Hundred Years?

by Thomas Brooks

The sermon emphasizes the fleeting nature of human life and the importance of seeking salvation before it's too late.

Scripture: Ecclesiastes 3:20, Matthew 7:13, Luke 19:41, Hebrews 9:27, James 4:14

Topics: "Eternity", "Compassion for the Lost"

Description

Thomas Brooks reflects on the fleeting nature of life, using the example of Xerxes who wept at the thought of his vast army being reduced to graves within a century. He emphasizes the urgency of considering the eternal fate of the multitudes around us, lamenting that many may face eternal separation from God. Brooks draws a parallel to Jesus, who wept over Jerusalem, highlighting the need for compassion and urgency in reaching the lost before it's too late.

Transcript

Xerxes, when he viewed his almost innumerable army of men, fell a-weeping, saying, "Where will all these men be within a hundred years?" He wept to think that all that mighty army would be in their graves within a hundred years.

Ah, what cause of weeping is there, when we behold the multitudes in the world, considering that within a few years--most of them may be in hell!

"As He approached and saw the city, He wept over it."

Luke 19:41

Source: <https://sermonindex.net/speakers/thomas-brooks/where-will-all-these-men-be-within-a-hundred-years/>

Grow in Your Walk with Christ

Listen and read messages that will stir your heart for Christ and point you to deeper repentance and devotion.

- 50,000+ Sermons from speakers past and present
- 3,900+ Classic Christian Books freely readable online
- 1,200+ Bible Translations and Commentaries
- Over 450k forum posts — Join our vibrant online Christian forum

www.sermonindex.net