Description

Thomas Brooks addresses the question 'Who can show us any good?' by emphasizing that the Lord Jesus Christ embodies the greatest and most suitable good for our souls. He describes Christ as a universal, matchless, and eternal good, highlighting that in Him we find mercy for pardon, power for salvation, wisdom for guidance, grace for enrichment, and righteousness for our needs. Brooks encourages believers to recognize that everything they require for their spiritual state is found in Christ.

Transcript

"Many are asking--Who can show us any good?"

Psalm 4:6

The Lord Jesus Christ is . . .

the greatest good,

a universal good,

a matchless good,

an incomparable good,

an infinite good,

an eternal good,

the most suitable good for my poor soul.

There is everything in Christ which suits the state, necessities, and needs of my poor soul. There is . . .

mercy in Him to pardon me, and power in Him to save me, and wisdom in Him to counsel me, and grace in Him to enrich me, and righteousness in Him to clothe me, etc.
