

Bringing Sin To The Light To Overcome

by Zac Poonen

This sermon emphasizes the importance of exposing sin by turning on the light of truth, highlighting the need for honesty and confession without making excuses for wrongdoing. It stresses the significance of coming into the light and being absolutely honest about giving in to sinful desires, whether it be anger, bitterness, theft, gossiping, or adultery.

Scripture: John 3:20, Ephesians 5:11, 1 John 1:9, Proverbs 28:13, James 5:16

Topics: "Exposing Sin", "Honesty and Confession"

Description

This sermon emphasizes the importance of exposing sin by turning on the light of truth, highlighting the need for honesty and confession without making excuses for wrongdoing. It stresses the significance of coming into the light and being absolutely honest about giving in to sinful desires, whether it be anger, bitterness, theft, gossiping, or adultery.

Transcript

People hide things in the dark. The thief does not like somebody turning on the light. Someone committing adultery does not like someone turning on the light.

Turning on the light is exposing sin, not hiding it. Be honest. Don't try to find some excuse for your sin.

You'll never overcome it. I tell you this, every sin for which you find some excuse, because it was this, I did it. Because of that, I did it.

I guarantee you'll never overcome it, because you're not coming into the light. You're not being absolutely honest that you just gave in to that lust, whether it's anger or bitterness or theft or stealing or wrong attitude or gossiping or whatever it is, name it, adultery, dirty thoughts, whatever it is, be honest.
